Noodle

"Pasta" according to Webster:
The term "pasta" was derived from "paste", which makes the dough for pasta. Is it true?

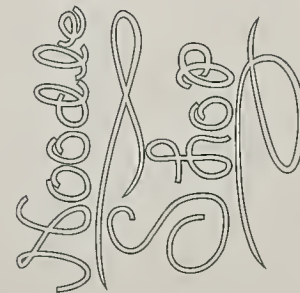

"Pasta" as defined by Martin Yan:
Marco Polo, the pioneer of world explorers, visited China during the 800s, brought "Mein", the Chinese pasta, to Italy. It soon became the favorite of Europeans. Around dinner tables, it was often heard, "Pass da Mein, Pass da Mein." Eventually, "Pass da Mein" became "Pasta".

Noodle:
Noodle has a long history in China. Northern Chinese favors wide, thick strands while Southern Chinese prefers slim noodle. Because of its taste and nutrition, noodle is always the first choice in China as an alternative to rice.

Preparation:
Noodle can be prepared in various choices of cookings, including cooked in liquid for smoothness, stir-fried for softness, pan-fried for crispness or drained after boil for its purity. Each cooking method brings out the ultimate characteristic of noodle: all the sauce it is cooked in is absorbed into the noodle itself. Therefore, the noodle alone makes a good meal.

Charlie Mom Chinese Cuisine:
One of the most innovative Chinese restaurants in New York City, best known for the creative menus which blended Chinese culinary art with American taste.

Noodle Shop from Charlie Mom Chinese Cuisine:
Another innovation by Charlie Mom, brings in the tradition of Chinese noodle cooking, prepared specially for the "uptown" taste, while our chef goes to the downtown market daily, hand-picked the freshest ingredients for every dish we serve at Charlie Mom Chinese Cuisine.

Silver Line Fine Egg Noodle

Fine egg noodle is also known as Silverline for its unique slim look. A strand of Silverline noodle measures only 1/64th of an inch. Made of all natural ingredients, it is both nutritious and delicious. Silverline is spongy but soft. Silverline is prepared either in our signature broth soup, drained or stir fried.

Stretched Noodle Lai Min - Lo Mein

Stretched Noodle is probably the most famous Chinese noodle in the western world. It is pronounced 'Lai Min' in Chinese which means 'Stretched Noodle'. The term Lai Min is suggesting the making of Lo Mein. Keep stretching a dough until it reaches the desired thickness. Lai Min is made of all natural ingredients and is nutritious. The term 'Lo Mein' stands for mixed noodles. It is because the most commonly preparation of Lai Min is to stir fried Lai Min together with other ingredients in a wok. Lo Mein goes fantastically with roast pork, beef, seafood and chicken as well as vegetables.

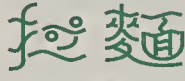

Silverline Rice Noodle Mei Fun

Commonly known as Rice Noodle, it is smooth and soft but not as spongy as Silverline Egg Noodle. Made of one hundred percent rice flour and is low in calorie, Silverline Rice Noodle is the perfect alternative of Silverline Egg Noodle for the vegetarians and the health conscious generation. The slim, shiny and transparent pasta is unique and appealing. The extraordinarily smooth taste of rice noodle makes it suitable to substitute for Ho Fun or Silverline Egg noodle served in broth, stir fried, pan fried or with sauces. We however, recommend rice noodle Singapore Style.

White Wide Noodle Ho Fun (Chow Fun)

Ho Fun is a fat white pasta made of rice flour. It is silky smooth, low in both cholesterol and calorie while delicious. Commonly known as 'Sa Ho Fun' - 'The Sand River Pasta'. Sa Ho Fun was named after Sa Ho, Sand River, a small village in Guang Chau settled next to a stream by the name of Sand River. The sand and fine aggregate in the river makes a natural filtration system so the water is clear and clear, perfect for the formation process of making silky smooth Ho Fun. Ho Fun is prepared either in our house special broth soup or stir fried. A smooth brown sauce is a favorite option for stir fried Ho Fun. When prepared in our signature broth, it is perfect with various Chinese barbecue, especially roasted duck.
